K-Bay motorcyclists ride for awareness

Tons of thundering steel rolled out the front gate of MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, Sunday as more than 50 motorcyclists set out on an island tour during the base's 2nd annual Aloha Motorcyclist Awareness Ride.

The ride was part of the MCB Hawaii Base Safety Center's effort to minimize traffic-related injuries and fatalities during the 101 Critical Days of Summer, and to bring the base motorcycling community together at the beginning of the season.

"We do this to increase the awareness of the general public that there are motorcyclists on the road. Automobile drivers need to be aware of that," said Dan Martyniuk, Base Safety Center traffic safety specialist.

The ride was also held in conjunction with the Destination Rides program sponsored by the Hawaii Motorcycle Dealers Association. During the month of May, Dunkin Donuts, Dixie Grill, and Banditos Cantina, donated a portion of every sale to Shriners Hospital when motorcyclists visited on Sundays.

"This is a great way to meet other motorcyclists in the community, and a great way to celebrate Memorial Day," said Maj. James Parran, Marine Corps Air Facility operations officer.

After leaving K-Bay, the procession of motorcycles traveled over the Koolaus on the H-3, and then headed east toward Kunia on the H-1. The route took the riders through the pineapple fields along Kunia Road, past Schofield Barracks, and then on to the North Shore.

The weather treated the riders well, with no rain, and only enough cloud cover to keep the heat down.

Bikes of all shapes and sizes made up the formation, and riders had a chance to meet people they normally do not ride with.

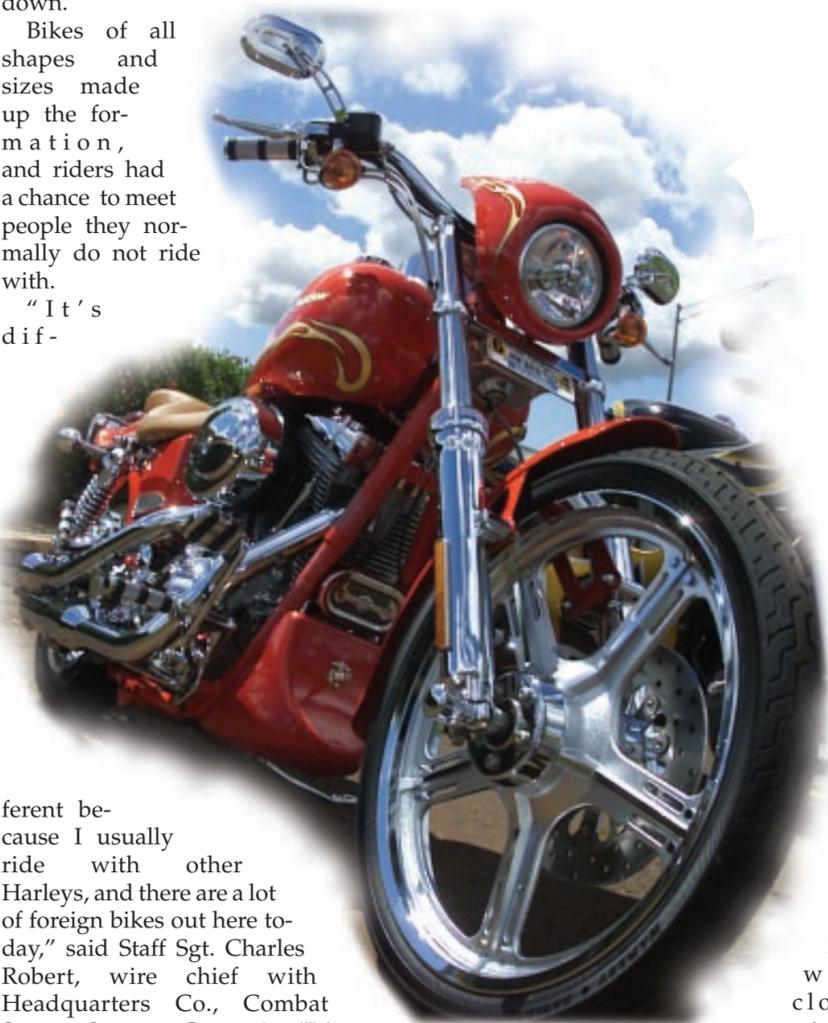

"It's different because I usually ride with other Harleys, and there are a lot of foreign bikes out here today," said Staff Sgt. Charles Robert, wire chief with Headquarters Co., Combat Service Support Group 3. "It's always good to get out and meet other people from the community, and I try to ride as much as I can."

No matter what the reason, all of the riders said they enjoyed the trip.

While enjoying a trip around the island with close-ness to nature only a motorcycle can provide, the participants helped increase awareness of the general public, and that was reason enough to call the ride a success.

The Polynesian Cultural Center was the halfway point for the 2nd Annual Aloha Motorcyclist Awareness Ride, and riders stopped to enjoy the view and fill up on fluids.

Rocker Room rocks longer hours

All Staff NCO Rocker Room club members can rock the Rocker Room six days a week.

Resulting from the Staff Noncommissioned Officers Membership Board's input, the Rocker Room will now operate Monday – Saturday evenings.

Open for billiards, pupus, dancing and karaoke, all Staff NCOs, and civilian equivalent employees, are invited to become club members to share the camaraderie, to take part in the many special events and to network in a social atmosphere among their peers.

According to Marine Corps Air Facility Sgt. Maj. Arthur Taylor, a club member, the Rocker Room's best features are the Marines, Sailors and their family members.

"We have the best group of folks here at the Rocker Room," said Taylor. Beyond an atmosphere where patrons have a military bond, Taylor is quick to point out that customers don't have to wait in long lines for beverages, worry about the safety of their personal belongings or make the drive across the island just for an evening out.

Manager of the Rocker Room, Lynn Colville strives to implement what the members want.

"It's their club," said Colville. "I'm here for them. I attend the board meetings and gather their input and work diligently to make their requests a reality."

Dedicated to the Rocker Room, Colville has served as a Marine Corps Community Services employee for 17 years and is well versed in the requests of club members.

"I tell you," said a smiling Colville, "the Staff NCOs here like to have a good time and know how to throw a party."

It is precisely because of this sentiment that Colville spends most of her time putting together special Rocker Room events.

Past parties have included Monday Night Football, a New Year's Eve Bash, St. Patty's Day, Casino Nights, Cinco de May, Cook-Your-Own-Steak and more.

With the current extended hours of operation, every Wednesday is "Wicked Wing Wednesday," featuring 25-cent chicken wings offered in four recipes. Each Friday night, the Rocker Room hosts a "Friday Free Pupu & Dance Party."

For special events, for happy hour after a long workday or to shoot some pool, all SNCOs are encouraged to patronize their club and become club members.

The Rocker Room's new hours of operation are as follows:

Monday	4:30 - 7:30 p.m.
Tuesday	4:30 - 7:30 p.m.
Wednesday	4:30 p.m. - 12 a.m.
Thursday	4:30 - 7:30 p.m.
Friday	4:30 p.m. - 2 a.m.

Tried, tested deployment ideas can help kids cope

Kim Gates

Information and Referral Specialist, Personal Services

Why do kids decide that the best time to saddle up and take a ride on your last nerve is when one parent is on the other side of the world? We sometimes don't know, but understanding what children are feeling and finding ways to ease them along is the key to a successful deployment for kids.

Emotional Cycles

Children experience the emotional cycles of deployment in the same manner as adults. These cycles involve anticipating and worrying about the departure, withdrawal just before departure, emotional disorganization right after departure, stabilization when things settle into a new routine, anticipation of the parent's return, and an adjustment period of about six weeks upon the return.

Unfortunately, these cycles mean nothing to a child. You must understand them yourself and accept your child's feelings as real, to make sense of these behaviors.

Inventory Checklist

"Take an honest family inventory of how effectively you talk, discipline and function as a family," said John Alamodin, the New Parent Support Program manager. "Recognize the areas where you are weak and focus on those areas. Don't be afraid to reach out to the people who are there to help," he added, whether they are family, friends, or the counselors within the Personal Services programs.

The New Parent Support Program (along with Kristen Darling, a training and curriculum specialist at the Child Development Center) has developed a group called "Together We Can Do It," which offers a wonderful opportunity to meet, brainstorm and network with childcare professionals and other parents.

As an adult, we tend to handle things better when we have all of the facts. Children are no different. Communication is just as important for children. Knowing how your children handle stress will help in how you communicate with them.

You can start by keeping them involved before the deployment actually starts.

Take some special time to talk to children before the parent leaves about how everyone is feeling. Explain where the parent is going, why and with whom. Reassure that the separation is only because of the "special job" that the parent does, and not anything else.

Keep in mind the age of your child and make sure that your explanations are on that level.

Inform teachers and caregivers who can help during this trying time by being sensitized to possible mood changes in your child.

Preparation Tips

There are some things that you can do ahead of time to prepare kids for the day of deployment. For example, spend some time addressing and putting postage stamps on envelopes with children, so they know they can write or draw pictures to send any time they want.

This will also empower them to communicate without having to wait for mom or dad to take care of mailing their letters.

The Key Volunteer program has "Write from the Heart" kits with all of the tools needed for kids to write. Personal Services also offers a program called "Stories from Afar," which provides a camera, books and space for your very own video productions. All you need to provide is a blank videotape.

Responsibilities will change when deployments occur. Keeping kids involved in daily routines will not only ease up the amount of your duties, but also will increase their self esteem as well.

Have the children pick out one or two duties such as taking out the trash, emptying the dishwasher or packing school lunches. This lets them know that they play an important part in keeping the family household running smoothly.

Try to avoid burdening children with too much though. Telling a child things like, "you are the man of the house now," or "you need to keep Mommy/Daddy strong," can actually have a negative effect. They are still kids. If something doesn't work quite right, this can lead to feelings of inadequacy or failure.

Deployment Ideas

Deployment activities give children other things to focus their attention on, while still keeping them active in the separation. There are many different activities to choose from, but you need to keep in mind the age of the children when choosing.

For example, "counting down" is always a popular activity. Many families cross the days off of a calendar, or make a paper chain and tear off a link for every day. A small bowl of 180 M&Ms or Hershey's Kisses works well for younger children. If the return date changes, as we know they often do, it is easier to add or remove a few candies than it is to adjust a big star on a calendar.

Here are just a few more tried, tested and successful ideas:

✓ Hidden Notes: Let kids hide a note in the parent's gear before leaving. This gives kids a "secret" to hold on to until they talk to the parent again.

✓ Maps and Times: Purchase a map to hang in kids' rooms and let them highlight where they are and where the parent is located. Talk to kids about time differences and frequently let them know throughout the day what time it is for the parent and what they could be doing.

✓ Coded Messages: Let children make up a code that is just between them and the deployed parent. They can write and receive messages in the code, which encourages communication. One simple example is to write the alphabet, and then under it write numbers or symbols as the code such as A=1 and B=2.

✓ Care Packages: Let kids plan special care packages. Give them the opportunity to

Above (left to right) — Hypnotized Marines have a good time throwing back a few drinks, but will soon realize the dangerous consequences. After a few drinks, several Marines “enter a vehicle” and go for a ride under the influence of alcohol. Lance Cpl. Hypnosis drives home drunk message

CAMP H.M. SMITH — Nearly 20 willing Marines fell under the hypnotic spell of Master Sgt. Bryan McDaniel during the “101 Critical Days of Summer” Safety Stand Down May 20, at the Sunset Lanai here.

Before requesting volunteers, McDaniel, a certified hypnotist from Calif., made it clear that the only people who should participate were those willing to be hypnotized. No one can be hypnotized against his or her own will, explained McDaniel.

McDaniel began the session with the 20 volunteering Marines by creating a very calm, relaxed atmosphere. The sounds of waves rolling against the shore emitted from the stage speakers.

The entranced Marines, laying one on top of another, received different commands — from laughing as hard as possible for no apparent reason, to giving the crowd of Marines, Sailors and civilians a parody of the Village People’s

Under the complete control of hypnotist Master Sgt. Bryan McDaniel, Marines perform the Village People’s “Y.M.C.A.”

“Y.M.C.A.” Under McDaniel’s spell, they were decked out in the full biker, Indian and construction workers’ attire commonly associated with the famous ‘70s group. The comedy came to an end after McDaniels suggested to the volunteers that they had entered a vehicle, with a driver who was under the influence of alcohol. McDaniel asked the passengers about their personal lives such as their state of residence and loved ones. He then had them lie on the stage floor with their arms crossed over their chest.

McDaniel notified the driver, Lance Cpl. Lashira Nix, a control material record clerk with Headquarters and Service Bn., Marine Forces Pacific, that she was responsible for the deaths of other Marines. He asked her how she was going to explain the deaths to their families, friends and loved ones.

Nix, still hypnotized, stood over the Marines’ bodies with an aimless stare and could not respond.

Afterwards, the participants returned to their seats, as instructed, and McDaniel brought them back to reality. He ended his presentation by stressing the importance of safety and the hazards of drinking and driving.

“People are not able to make good decisions once they start to drink,” explained McDaniel.

“Decisions must be made beforehand,” he emphasized.

Officers may earn MBA at Navy school

Army Sgt. 1st Class
Kathleen T. Rhem

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Military officers and Department of Defense (DoD) civilians can now earn a defense-focused masters of business administration (MBA) degree through the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, Calif.

The program covers all the elements of a typical MBA program, but focuses some of the material on military-specific issues, according to Douglas Brook, dean of the institution’s Graduate School of Business and Public Policy.

Brook said this is the only defense-focused MBA program in the country.

Military officers, typically in the O-3 to O-4 ranks, attend the school for 18 months on a resident basis. Brook explained that most of the officers are from the Navy, but officers from other services and civilians are welcome to apply.

The first 50 students in the program began their coursework in January, and another 100 begin studies this summer. Brook explained new classes will start twice each year.

In September, the school will enter into a partnership with the University of Maryland to offer the same degree on a nonresident basis in Washington. Classes will meet on Saturdays with Maryland professors and instructors teaching the common subjects and military-specific subjects being taught by visiting faculty from Monterey or through distance-learning methods.

“We’re taking our basic MBA program here and offering it to a different population of students — people who would never be able to come to Monterey on a resident program but would like a defense-focused MBA,” Brook said.

He said he expects 12 to 25 DoD civilians to enroll in the new program here this year.

The defense-focused MBA has three pieces, Brook said. A business core will reflect subjects covered in other MBA programs, but with a DoD focus. For instance, subjects might include economics for a defense manager, and an organizational design course would focus on defense organizations, Brook explained. A mission-related segment of coursework would include broad courses aimed at defense management, including courses in DoD strategy and policy, DoD resource determination, e-business for defense and the budget and appropriations process.

The third piece of this degree is what Brook called an individual concentration. “They’ll concentrate course work on areas in which they might be assigned,” he said. “This way they’ll get what they need in terms of more direct professional qualifications.”

He said individual concentration areas can include acquisition and contracting, logistics, financial management, human resource management or information management.

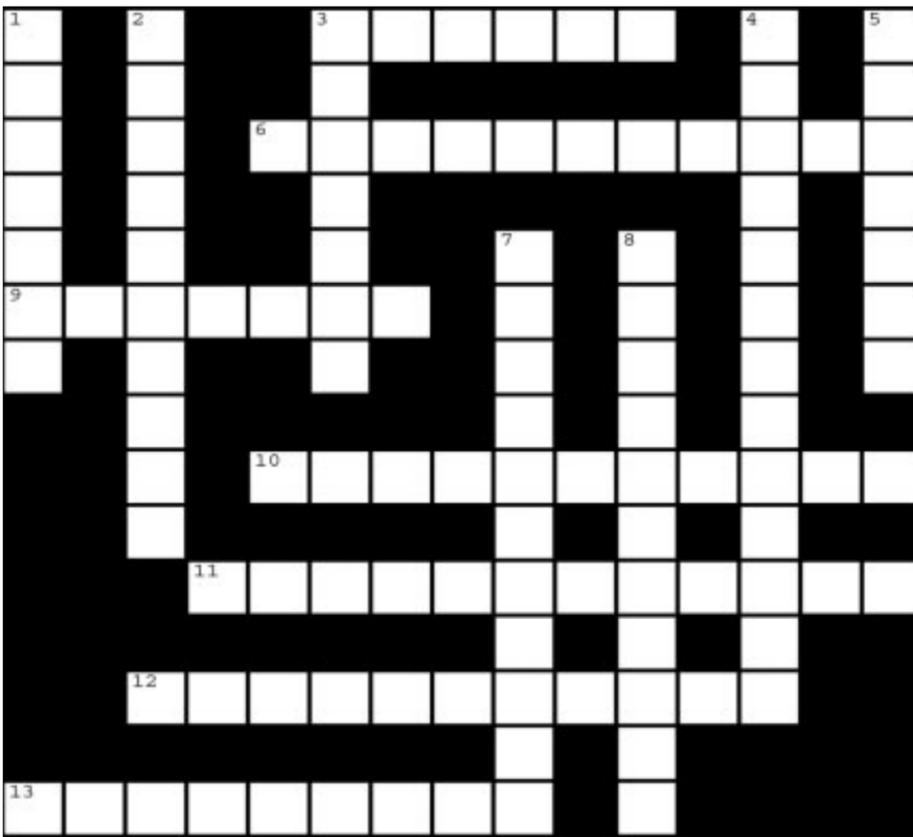

Individuals seeking more information on the defense-focused MBA programs through the Naval Postgraduate School should speak to their assignments manager or visit www.nps.navy.mil.

Hawaii Salutes Military

Rounding out May's Hawaii Military Appreciation Month activities, today and Saturday, attend the Hickam Air Force Base's "Experience Hawaii with Aloha Expo."

The expo will be complete with kiddie activities, entertainment, food booths, door prizes and free admission. Plan to enjoy this festive occasion.

State Tests Emergency Alerts

The State Civil Defense monthly test of sirens and the Emergency Alert System will run Monday at 11:45 a.m.

The siren is a steady 45-second tone, used to alert the public on any emergency which poses or may pose a threat to life and property.

When sounded, the signal means to turn on any radio or television for emergency information and instructions broadcast by civil defense agencies.

NCOA Job Fair Scheduled

The Noncommissioned Officers Association will be sponsoring a job fair at the Hickam Air Force Base Officer's Club (Bldg. 907) from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday, June 11.

The job fair is free and open to all; however, the NCOA Mini Resume must be completed for admittance to meet numerous recruiters from America's leading employers and to explore career opportunities.

For more information, visit the NCOA website at www.ncoausa.org.

The NCOA provides unlimited, nationwide job opportunities for all military personnel, veterans, family members, government employees.

Filipino Fiesta Planned

The Filipino Community Center is issuing a call for participants and volunteers for this year's 10th annual Filipino Fiesta, June 15 at Kapiolani Park in Waikiki.

The fiesta is a family event, free to the public, and its theme is "Filipinos: Making a Difference." The fun begins with a parade at 9 a.m., and continues throughout the day with live entertainment by local and Filipino performers, food, crafts, cultural displays and more.

Food and craft vendors are welcome to set up shop. If you're interested in a booth or volunteering, call 847-6401 for opportunities.

Economics Degree Offered

The University of Oklahoma offers a non-thesis Master's in Managerial Economics degree.

Located at Hickam Air Force Base's Hangar 2, the program only requires 32 semester hours, a comprehensive exam and a research paper — which all can be accomplished in 18 months.

Another benefit, the program only meets weekly, making it TAD and TDY friendly for time-deprived students.

For details, call the University of Oklahoma at 449-6364.

Free Ads--Free Ads--Free Ads--Free Ads--Free Ads

Ads are accepted from active duty and retired military personnel, their family members and MCB Hawaii civil service workers. Ads are free and will appear in two issues of the Hawaii Marine, or as applicable.

The deadline for submitting ads to the Hawaii Marine is at 4 p.m. the Friday of the week prior to publication. Forms may be filled out Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the MCB Hawaii Public Affairs Office, located in Bldg. 216, aboard Kaneohe Bay.

Makeponos may be used only for noncommercial classified ads containing items of personal property offered by and for individuals authorized to use this service. Such ads must represent incidental exchanges, not of a sustained business nature, which are run on a first-come, first served, space-available basis.

Call 257-8840 for more.

Worth Repeating: "The world hates change; yet, it is the only thing that has brought progress."
